EUROPEAN AIR LAW ASSOCIATION (EALA)

14TH LIABILITY SEMINAR

EALA is delighted to invite you to attend its 14th Liability Seminar, to be held in Paris. Over many centuries, Paris has hosted, and will continue to host, spectacular monuments and activities. Among these are developments in aviation, including aviation law.

As early as 23rd April 1784 a police directive was issued which was aimed exclusively at the balloons of the Montgolfier Brothers: flights were not to take place without prior authorisation. The purpose of this measure was of course to protect the population. In the early 1900s, the French jurist Paul Fauchille suggested that a code of international air navigation be created by the 'Institut de droit international'. Interestingly, this was one of the rare instances where legal process went ahead of technology. On 31st January 2025, we aim at achieving that prospective vision again.

The 11th EALA Liability Seminar will address a great variety of subjects, identifying the state of the art of aviation:

- an Interview with Manuela Goya, Secretary General, Officer responsible for sustainable development, Transavia, Paris;
- Product liability in a new era, discussing the contractual and other relations between the various stakeholders in the aviation chain, under applicable legal regimes;
- Aviation on Trial: Grounded by Law or Bound for a Costly Sustainable Future? in which panel current trends in the environmental debate, including proceedings 'greenwashing' will be argued;
- Rejuvenating the Montreal Convention 1999, celebrating its 25th birthday while being affected by the implementation and enforcement of regional and domestic regulations on airline liability;
- Digitalization of aviation tools, considering technical instruments facilitating navigation of aircraft while also endangering aviation safety in moves pertaining to cyber security;
- Criminalization of aviation accidents, in which context a balance must be found between the ultimate objective of achieving the highest degree of safety and the paradigm of transparency in order to contribute to justice in criminal proceedings.

Concluding remarks and drinks will be offered at the end of the seminar day.
